Employee Retention Credit (ERC)

Employee Retention Credit (ERC) is a non-refundable credit that the IRS gives to the eligible businesses. BE CAREFUL not all businesses are eligible. You must meet the IRS qualifications. Many newly opened businesses have arise for the solely purpose of encouraging business owners to file this claim but soon these businesses will disappear. They normally charge about 30% of the refunded amount. BE CAREFUL. This process has two folds. One, you need to meet the qualifications. Second, you must amend form 941. Based on the amended return and the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) final decision, the IRS will send you a refund. The people who are encouraging you to file a claim for this credit never explain or give you information on how you qualify for the ERC, they only give you the amended 941 return which has no value at this point. I guaranty that a representative from the IRS will at some point reach out to you and as how you became eligible for the ERC and you would need to show the supporting documents of your eligibility. If you can not provide the supporting documents, you may be required to re-pay the IRS for the whole amount of the credit plus penalties and interest, aside from other consequences.

NOW what to do:

We at www.Green60.com will not charge you to apply for the credit or review your previously prepared application. We only want you to be safe and sound. Please read the following message that came to us last week from the IRS. Call me at (844)473-3660 and we can talk.

IRS creates withdrawal process for Employee Retention Credit (ERC) claims

The IRS recently announced a withdrawal process for ERC claims to help those who filed an Employee Retention Credit \(ERC\) claim and are concerned about its accuracy.

This new withdrawal option allows certain employers that filed an ERC claim but have not received a refund to withdraw their claim and avoid future repayment, interest and penalties.

Employers that submitted an ERC claim that's still being processed can withdraw their claim and avoid the possibility of getting a refund for which they're ineligible.

Sohrab Rowshan - Founder, Green 60

After receiving his master's degree in Cost Accounting in 1975, Sohrab Rowshan was forced to leave his home country and come to the United States with his family with very little money.

Working in a factory pressing cases for cassette tapes, Mr. Rowshan realized this was not the future he had imagined for himself nor his family and continued to search for work in his initial field of study; accounting.

Upon securing a job in the payroll department of Long Beach Memorial Hospital, Mr. Rowshan was faced with yet another challenge; his salary was not enough to pay for both rent and his family's growing expenses. It was then that Mr. Rowshan began a career as an accountant in a restaurant.

About Sohrab Rowshan

Shortly thereafter Mr. Rowshan moved to the headquarters of the restaurant chain to work as a Financial Analyst. This enabled him to build a solid and lasting relationship with one of the Senior VP's who recommended him to a credit union to work as a Cash Management Officer. It was in this role that he learned the value of customer service and how money is valued not only as a source of income but also in the form of investments.

It was in 1989 that Mr. Rowshan began offering accounting services under his own business while continuing to work at the credit union. In 1993 Mr. Rowshan had to make a difficult choice; to continue to work for others and maintain a comfortable monthly salary - something he had worked so hard to obtain after arriving in the United States with little money with humble beginnings in a cassette factory, or become self-employed.

With a mortgage and a child in college, Mr. Rowshan had to consider many factors before making a final decision. Mr. Rowshan has always believed that a positive and optimistic attitude - combined with skill and knowledge, will always yield positive results. It was time to put his wealth of experience and knowledge to use in a way that would not only benefit his clients but also help to build the solid foundation he and his family enjoy today. This is the same vision he lives by and hopes to bring to each client with Green 60. The goal of Green 60 is to lift the burden of payroll and allow employers to focus on managing and growing their business.
